

Marisa D'Amore

SPEAKER | WRITER | PODCAST HOST

Encouraging people to see beyond limitation and live with purpose.

Marisa D'Amore is a writer and speaker who brings personal experience and practical encouragement to conversations about identity, resilience, disability and purpose.

Born 14 weeks premature and legally blind, Marisa understands what it feels like to be underestimated or defined by what others believe is possible. Through honest stories and thoughtful insight, she encourages audiences to move beyond limiting labels, recognize strengths that may be overlooked and approach life with greater confidence and purpose.

Her Christian faith shapes her life and work. In faith-based settings, Marisa also shares biblical encouragement about identity in Christ, trusting God through adversity and living with purpose.

A MESSAGE SHAPED FOR YOUR AUDIENCE

Every audience is different. Marisa thoughtfully adapts each presentation to the people in the room, the event theme and the setting.

- Identity, confidence and purpose
- Resilience through adversity
- Moving beyond limiting labels
- Disability awareness and recognizing ability beyond assumptions
- Faith, hope and identity in Christ

AUDIENCES AND SETTINGS

Marisa has spoken in Christian school chapels, churches, nonprofit and fundraising events, disability-focused programs, student leadership settings and community gatherings.

Her audiences have included students, families, church members, community leaders and supporters of organizations serving people with vision loss. She welcomes invitations from both faith-based and general organizations.

WHAT AUDIENCES CAN EXPECT

Marisa speaks with warmth, honesty and respect for the people in the room. She invites listeners to consider how they see themselves, how they view others and what may still be possible in their lives.

Her goal is for audiences to leave encouraged, more aware of the abilities of others and reminded that limitations do not determine a person's worth or purpose.
